

Frank Bowman raises hay, saddle horses and grass finished beef on a 5th generation family farm along the banks of the Sangamon River just outside Springfield, IL. Frank and his wife Stacy and have ridden much of the Rocky Mountain West and many of the trails in the Heartland on horseback. He has served on the Board of Directors for the Horsemen's Council of Illinois for over 12 years, the past eight as President, and currently serves as the association's first executive director. When he's not working young horses or out trail riding Frank can be found evangelizing the need for responsible horse ownership at equine functions across the U.S. He understands the ever increasing need to share trails, ride smart and educating our urban cousins about real animal welfare while focused on enhancing the overall health and economic future of the horse.
